The Master's degree in Business Real Estate Law trains lawyers to master the legal, economic and technical issues related to the operation of real estate. The programme covers real estate law, property development, contractual arrangements, leases and taxation.

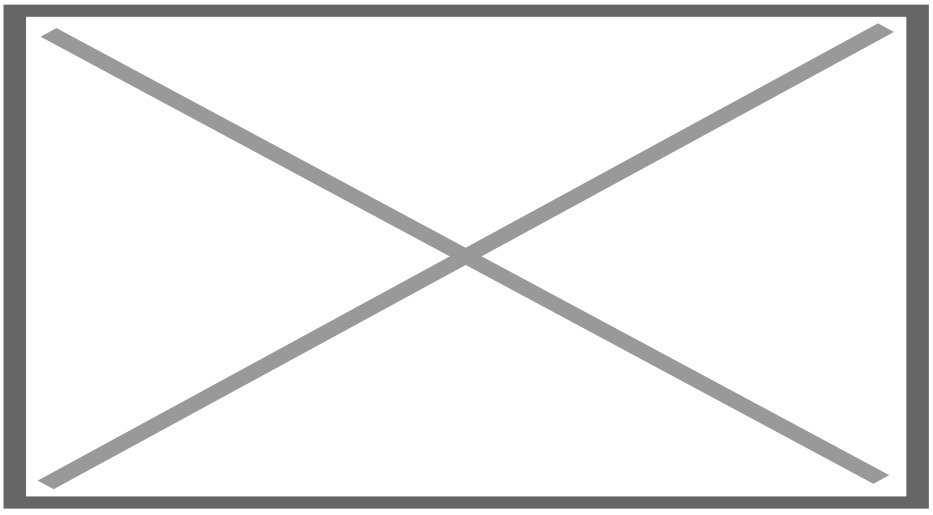

The Master's degree is a multidisciplinary programme designed for future notaries, solicitors and corporate lawyers (property development, property asset management, co-ownership association lawyers, etc.) specialising in real estate. The approach is academic but also practical and concrete, based on situations and cases encountered on a daily basis by professionals in the sector, with studies of structures and practical situations.

Présentation

Skills

The Master's degree in Business Real Estate Law allows students to acquire advanced skills in special contract law, real estate law, artificial intelligence law, lease law and business tax law.

Objectives

The Master's degree in Commercial Real Estate aims to provide students with comprehensive, cross-disciplinary training in real estate law. This programme requires solid skills in civil law (contracts, security interests, property law, etc.) and commercial law. The construction law/environmental and urban planning law specialisations are never combined in existing M2 programmes, yet this is precisely what companies and law firms are looking for.
