Learning outcome targets

This course takes into account contemporary developments in sports management and focuses on the ability of public, associative and private stakeholders to adapt and innovate, particularly in the following areas:

- Events in the broadest sense of the term, by approaching them from all their aspects: political, social, organisational, economic, managerial, marketing, legal and sporting
- The design and management of sports venues and equipment
- Leadership and development strategies in the regions
- The development of sports practices.In this respect, the courses (the M1 and 3 M2) offer students the opportunity to develop the skills necessary to intervene in the formulation of policies and strategies, the management, development and organisation of sports (or sport-related) events and projects. Students will acquire the following skills in particular:
- Analysis (assessment, diagnosis, audit, etc.)
- Advice (drafting recommendations, etc.)
- Management (strategy, management, monitoring, project evaluation, etc.).
- This training also seeks to respond to the profound changes in the challenge posed by sports policies.
