11. Parc de Sceaux The Parc de Sceaux, the entire domain of Sceaux, is owned by the Hauts-de-Seine department and its park extends over the territories of the communes of Sceaux and Antony. The park was designed by André Le Nôtre at the end of the XVII^e century at the request of Colbert and then his son the Marquis de Seignelay. During the Revolution, through the speculations of the Black Band, the estate was looted, sold to a farmer, and both the castle and the waterfalls were destroyed. A new castle was built in 1856 by his daughter, married to the Duke of Treviso.
